Modern Domestic Landscapes. Women's crossed paths between Latin America and Europe explores the legacy of women working in the expanded field of architecture, who played a crucial role at the crossroads between creating the habitat of modern life and claiming a room of their own—both personally and professionally—within the framework of the exchanges opened up by the Modern Movement between Europe and Latin America.

The aim is to map the cross-woven work of diverse women in Latin America whose agency redefined the domestic realm through transatlantic dialogues. Their situated practices often integrated local knowledge, artisanal traditions, and technological approaches, while foregrounding the social and gendered dimensions embedded in everyday domestic habits and their impact on the architectural field.

By incorporating new voices and key architectural archives, the exhibition highlights the creative legacy of women who expanded and redefined domestic interior spaces through cultural and professional networks. It invites perspectives on how their interconnected practices transformed the spatial forms of everyday life –from interiors and furniture to objects and the garden– contributing to a shared transatlantic modern experience articulated around three thematic axes:

1. Modern Domestic Interiors
2. Modern Domestic Landscapes
3. Modern Domestic Everyday life objects

Accepted contributions will be presented as Posters, alongside the mapping Panel and the comprehensive Timeline featured in the exhibition.
